FIGHT FOR LA CANADA TO REACH CRISIS AUGUST 30

Residents of District Undecided as to School Affiliation—Will Make Choice Between Pasadena and Glendale Before September 1 to Secure High School Privileges

An election which will determine the high school privileges of La Canada, and which immediately concerns Glendale, will take place in La Canada August 30.

Under a law recently enacted, all school districts in this state are required to join some high school district. La Canada has no high school of its own and the majority of its students have een attending Glendale Union high school. Against 18 who have been enrolled here, 8 have been going to Pasadena.

Glendale is Popular

The equivalent of tuition for these students, has been paid by the Canada district and the boys and girls have been transported by bus.

Under the requirements of the law mentioned, the La Canada district would naturally join Glendale. The school tax rate is lower than that of Pasadena and its people are more closely affiliated with Glendale and the small communities adjoining it on the north.

Flintridge Favors Pasadena

But, an exclusive residential district is growing up around the Flintridge Country Club, composed of wealthy people, and the promoters of that district, is is said, feel that it will have more prestige if its students attend Pasadena high school than if they come to Glendale. This element of the community is said to be electioneering for Pasadena.

School officials well acquainted with the situation feel that the vote is likely to be in favor of Glendale, but they will make no effort to sway public opinion, letting La Canada decide for herself.

Advantage to Glendale

Should this territory be annexed to the Glendale high school district, it would materially increase the revenues and would probably be a factor in determining the site for the school, should it be moved from its present location.

Another project mentioned which would be affected by such annexation is the electrolization of the Salt Lake railroad on Glendale avenue. Should that take place and lines be extended northeast and northwest to take in La Canada, as well as Montrose, La Crescenta, Tujunga and communities still farther west, those communities would secure direct transportation to Los Angeles through Glendale by a short line.

In the light of these considerations, the prediction has been made that the results of the election may be far-reaching.

SCHOOL BOARD AND COUNCIL DEFERS CONFERENCE

With Additional Demands for Money to Pave the School Board Is Helpless

The conference between members of the City Council and Board of Education, which was to have taken place last night, was postponed because it was found impossible to assemble the Board of Education on such short notice.

The matter they were to discuss is of prime importance and concerns the improvement of streets on which Glendale school grounds face. As the law now stands, school boards may assume their proportion of the cost of paving such streets, but it is not obligatory.

No Funds Available

At the present time, says Superintendent R. D. White, no funds are included in the budget which could be appropriated for the purpose. So heavy are the demands on school funds caused by the continuous and very rapid increase in school attendance, that the taxing capacity of the district is exhausted by the expense of conducting the schools, leaving no margin for street improvement.

In the past, the difficulty has sometimes been met by the assessment district assuming the whole burden of the improvement. This has been objected to as unfair. The only other way to finance the improvement would be for the city itself to assume the cost, and the city objects on the same grounds raised by the Board of Education—that it needs all its funds for other purposes.

New Paving Demanded

It is a big problem, Mr. White says, and growing bigger. It has been called up at this time by the proceedings to pave Mariposa and Garfield streets, upon which the Acacia avenue school fronts.

The paving of three thoroughfares bordering the Doran street school campus is also under consideration. That alone would cost $3600 with the grounds their present size, and if enlarged by the purchase of additional ground, to be asked for in the proposed school bond issue, the cost would be doubled, or $7000.

With ten or more schools abutting on streets that are demanding improvement, some policy must be adopted, Mr. White says, for it will not do for our schools to become a stumbling block in the path of progress.

TOOL THIEVES HERE

M. Paulson, a building contractor, reported to the police department that a number of valuable tools were stolen from a job he was on at Adams street and Lexington drive, last night.

ROSES OF VERDUGO NOD FRAGRANTLY ON ART FOLKS

A dinner, unique and most interesting, was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Russell, who now occupy the famous old adobe house of the Verdugos.

The table was spread on the lawn, under the rose tree, gnarled and old, planted more than a century ago by a fair senorita

The rose tree was a gorgeous mass of bloom, filling the air with fragrance and delight. Soft electric light bulbs and the rays of the full moon shed radiance over the woodland; a sylvan scene, with a chorus of the crickets from the grasses, and the old Spanish type adobe house as a background.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell had gathered together a group of artists in their various lines, from many states, now sojourning in Southern California.

Spanish dishes, with their aromatic spices and delicious flavors, were served to the guests, who were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Smith, Mme. Enna L. Zarabua, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Dock, of Philadelphia; Miss Peckye, of New York; Mrs. Hull and Miss Hull, of Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. Shipman and Miss Shipman, of New York; Mme. Azilda Quevillon, of San Francisco; Mrs. Zetta Goode Gibbons, Mr. McClosky, and the host and hostess.

At the close of the evening Mr. Mc Closkey, father of Mrs. Russel, held a reception in his studio, where the guests were permitted to view the portraits and other pictures painted by Mr. McCloskey, who is a portrait painter of note.

WOMAN RUN DOWN BY TRUCK; LEAPS TO SAFETY

Mrs. Olive W. Kelso, 39 North Meredith avenue, Pasadena, while returning home from Hollywood at noon today, reached the intersection of Los Feliz road and San Fernando road, when a Los Angeles grocery truck hove in sight, and to avoid the truck, which, she says, was coming north at high speed, she steered her car into the Anderson oil station. The bumper crashed through the wall, one lamp was torn off, the radiator damaged and the bumper bent.

It was a new Dodge car that had been run but 752 miles. Mrs. Kelso sprang or was thrown from the car just as it struck and fortunately escaped injury.

DEVOTED WIFE OF AGED WAR HERO AT HIS BEDSIDE

The wife of Lieutenant George Le Mesnager, (pronounced (Lemenez-hay) has arrived from France to nurse her aged husband, who recently suffered a stroke of apoplexy. When the lieutenant returned from France at the close of the war he established a little home in Verdugo Woodlands, away up in the canyon near the end of Hermosita Drive, where he had owned a few acres for a number of years. His wife went back to the homeland with their daughter, Mademoiselle Yvonne, whom they wished might finish her education abroad. But news of her hero husband's illness brought "le Madame" to the Southland again as fast as steamship and train could carry her.

Lieut. Le Mesnager served his beloved France faithfully and well in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, though he had to return from California, where he located in 1866, to do so. After that war he came back to this region, where he lived for nearly half a century, when love for the tri-color again called him to action. Though almost 70 years of age he threw off the burden of the years and turned across the waters to join his countrymen in beating back the German hordes who again sought to overrun La Belle France. Though almost at the end of life's allotted span, he entered with all the fire and vigor of youth upon the defense of his native land. Seemingly the weight of years rolled back and he was again the lusty, vigorous young man who had so bravely faced German shot and shell nearly half a century ago.

As a member of the 106th Regiment which Gen. Petin later declared was the bravest in the French army, Lieut. Le Mesnager performed prodigies of valor at Verdun, St. Hilaire, the Somme, St. Quentin, Chemin de Dames and many other noted battlefields. Then when America joined the Allies the fiery old veteran was given an assignment as instructor to the fast-arriving boys of Uncle Sam, and in this position he was of inestimable service to Gen. Pershing.

When the armistice came he secured his release as soon as possible and hastened back to his beloved green Verdugo hills, covered with honors and medals and bearing with him the thanks and plaudits of his admiring countrymen. May the old hero recover from his recent stroke and spend many more happy years in the peaceful surroundings of his adopted home.

FEDERAL EMPLOYES DEMAND STANDARD SCALE OF PAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The National Federation of Federal Employes, composed of government employes, men and women, in every occupation, from the professions and sciences to charwomen and laborers, in every State and Territory of the United States, will hold its 50th annual convention in New Orleans, September 12-16.

Every government service is represented in the membership of the National Federation of Federal Employes, which was organized "to advance the social and economic welfare and education of the employes of the United States and to aid in the perfection of systems that will make for greater efficiency in the various services of the United States."

The outstanding feature of the Federal program is its campaign for the Lehlbach-Sterling bills, which provide for reclassification of the entire Civil Service on a strictly merit basis, the elimination of politics from appointments and promotions and a standardized pay scale fixed according to the skill and training required for the job. The salary scale now in effect is based on standards of 1854.

Several hundred delegates are expected to attend the convention, and there will be numbers of women among them. Three of the largest and most active organized groups are composed entirely of women, while several of the mixed locals have women presidents and secretaries who will be in attendance.

Preconvention sessions of the executive council of the Federation will be held in New Orleans September 1 and 17.

SWINDLE TRUST OF GIGANTIC SIZE IS REVEALED

Principals in Three-Million-Dollar Fraud Secured Big Sum From One Man

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—A series of sensational dvelopments in the revelation of a $3,000,000 "bond theft trust" were climaxed here this afternoon by the surrender of Alva W. Harshman of Milwaukee, one of the alleged ringleaders. Harshman made an amaznig confession of "high finance," including a statement that the gang was preparing to swindle a Washington, D. C., man out of $800,000 at the time of their arrest.

Eight men are now in custody.

The arrest of Z. W. Davis, former millonaire president of the Winton Automobile Company, was ordered today in connection with the "$3,000,000 bond theft trust" under investigation by federal authorities here. Davis is also president of the Diamond Cement Company and Glove Stove Company of Cleveland.

District Attorney Clinnin declared that, although Davis had written the band a letter threatening suicide because of his losses, there was evidence that he still had a fortune of $15,000,000.

The government's case thus far shows one of the greatest conspiracies ever unearthed in this country. Its ramifications run clear to Los Angeles and touch into scores of cities throughout the East and Middle West.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC LEASES HOME OF H. E. BARTLETT

Glendale's music colony is experiencing a little thrill over the announcement of the establishment in this city of the California Academy of Music, and the additional news that it has leased for school purposes the residence of H. E. Bartlett, which corners on Brand and Lexington Drive and which is directly opposite the clubhouse site of the Tuesday afternoon Club.

At the head of the piano department in this new school is Glendale's distinguished townswoman, Miss Elsa Breidt, the assisting instructors being Mrs. Hernando Lee and Mrs. Pearl G. Curran, also of this city.

VERDUGOANS WANT WATER SERVICE

Dr. H. B. Crocker was the spokesman for residents of the East side of Verdugo Canyon in an appeal for water srvice from the city at the meeting of the City Council last night.

That section has been a part of Glendale for the past nine years but has been too far above the highest of the city reservoirs to receive service. Dr. Crocker's proposition was that the city purchase the water system of the Newport Company, which has a reservoir at the 1100-foot elevation, which would serve the east side of Verdugo Canyon that is now dependent on local springs and water tunnels.

The appeal was referred to City Manager Reeves for investigation and report.

LARGE PEARS SOON READY FOR MARKET

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Fuelscher and daughters, Annie and Alice, of 237 South Orange stret, accompanied by Miss Margaret Fife of 517 North Jackson street, left Glendale Saturday afternoon in their auto and drove to Lancaster, returning to Palmdale for the night. On Sunday they drove on 16 miles to the ranch of Mrs. Fuelscher's cousin, Guy Chase, where they spent the day. Mr. Chase has a large pear ranch, some of the trees yielding pears that weigh almost a pound and a half. These pears are the only kind that will keep from one season to the other and are being picked for shipping to Eastern markets. As this was the first time Mrs. Fuelscher had ever seen her cousin, much of the time was spent in talking over family relationships.

SYCAMORE CANYON IMPROVEMENT IS APPROVED

Old Project Is Revived and Acted Upon by City Council—Help Residents

The action taken by the City Council at a special session held Monday evening, at which proceedings were reviewed for the improvement of Sycamore canyon road as a combined boulevard and outlet for storm waters, will be of far-reaching interest.

At the time proceedings were rescinded last winter, they had been carried to a point where bids for the paving of the thoroughfare had been received. These proceeding had included the securing of a right-of-way at a cost of about $35,000, collected from a special assessment district covering the section east of Everett street. Of this sum, $23,000 was paid in cash.

Call for Boulevard

The proceedings called for a boulevard 100 feet wide to allow for a right-of-way for an electric car line. The character of the proposed paving brought the expense upon the abutting property to $4.50 per running foot on each side of the street, of $9 per running foot, making the cost to the frontage $485 an acre, and the balance of the assessment district, $185 an acre.

Because of dissatisfaction with these figures, the city decided to drop the matter for the time being.

Original Proposition

The southern terminus of the original proceedings was the old boundary line between Glendale and Tropico, between Windsor and Garfield avenues. At that point the storm waters will naturally be discharged into the gully to the east of Glendale avenue and Forest Lawn memorial park, which would carry them to the Los Angeles river.

Those who are best informed in regard to the proposition believe it can now be carried through, that not enough protestants will be found to block proceedings. As many of the property owners abutting on the proposed boulevard bought in expectation of such a street and having their holdings improved accordingly, there will be great jubilation in many quarters.

Protests Heard

In the protests made heretofore against the cost of the improvement, the contention has been that since a portion of the expense is caused by the necessity of providing drainage for storm waters, a part of the cost should be borne by the city as a whole rather than the assessment district. It is understood that, in voting last night, members of the council accepted this view and will undertake to lighten the burden on residents of the east side by having a portion of the cost covered by a general city-wide assessment.

At last night's meeting the city attorney and city engineer were instructed to prepare the necessary proceedings for the improvement of this boulevard. The details as to the payment of this improvement as worked out by the City Council, are as follows:

"The abutting property is to pay for a class of paving suitable for a similar street, the excess cost necessitated by the use of a more expensive type of paving to carry the storm waters, to be assessed upon a district which shall coincide with the boundaries of the city of Glendale."

One of the principal reasons for building this road is that the storm waters from Sycamore canyon may be properly taken care of. In past years, this water, during each storm, came rushing out of the canyon until it struck Adams street, tearing up the roadway, the curbing, and in some instances, the sidewalk. At the lower end of Adams street where the water enters the storm drain, which in turn runs down through Tropico to the Los Angeles river, considerable damage was done during the last big storm, several years ago. At that time a house was undermined, whereupon it toppled over into the wash. It was this disastrous year that caused the city officials to do something in the way of warding off this trouble in years to come.

Proposed Boulevard

The proposed boulevard leaves Sycamore canyon at Lexington drive. It continues west for a short distance, where it turns south, and continues across California, Wilson, Broadway, Harvard, Orange Grove, Colorado, Elk, the proposed extensions of Chestnut and Maple, and on southward to Windsor, where it empties into the wash. Very little trouble has ever been experienced along the wash below Windsor, and for this reason the improvement of that district has not been agitated at this time.

This boulevard will be made of especially heavy construction so that it may satisfactorily take care of the storm waters. It will be made 100 feet in width, in order that if the proposed loop of the Pacific Electric railway is ever constructed, the single track may be run along the center of the boulevard.

The city attorney and city engineer will report to the Council on this matter as soon as possible, after which the work of improving the boulevard will be rushed.

No doubt every business firm or organization lays out for itself a program of work which it will attempt to accomplish—it has a plan which it will endeavor to bring to a successful conclusion. In other words, the business establishment which would prove a success must "Plan its work, then work its plan."

In this regard the Chamber of Commerce of Glendale is no exception, except, possibly, in the size of the plan it will endeavor to work. If the Chamber is going to bring about the things it has set itself to accomplish it must surely keep its nose on the grindstone all the time. The list of public improvements that the local Chamber is attempting to bring about is of interest to every thinking person in Glendale.

Stimulates Civic Loyalty

Here are a few of them:

It is endeavoring to stimulate a loyal civic spirit through frequent meetings designed to consolidate the interest of all citizens in the community.

It is endeavoring to bring about a satisfactory adjustment of the school situation and to work with present officials to the end that Glendale shall have adequate buildings, equipment and sufficient funds to keep an efficient staff of instructors.

It is urging the completion of a comprehensive sewerage plan for Glendale. Its aim is to keep in touch with the problem of the water supply for the immediate needs and the future growth of Glendale.

It is endeavoring to secure the erection of a large tourist hotel in Glendale.

Studies Industrial Needs

It is studying the needs of Glendale from an industrial standpoint. It is trying to determine the kind of industries best adapted to this locality, the resources to be found here, and to seek to bring those in that can prosper and be an asset to the community.

It is endeavoring to get concerted action on the new Southern Pacific Railroad station, with the purpose of having all trains stop for passengers, deliver and pick up mail and express.

It is making a thorough investigation of the postal service in Glendale in cooperation with local postal executives. It is right now making a determined fight for an independent postoffice here.

It assisted materially in the voting of bonds for the Glendale public park in the northwest part of the city, and is now doing eevrything it can to have that park improved in an elaborate manner.

Fights Paving Cutting

It is encouraging such plans of paving as will eliminate the necessity of cutting up new paving for the laying of pipes, water mains, sewer connections, etc.

It is seeking to have adequate and uniform street signs placed throughout the city.

It is advocating the extension of the ornamental street lights to residential portions of the city that are not sufficiently lighted at this time.

Now that the public park has been secured the Chamber is interested in having it equipped in an efficient manner for the convenience of camping tourists.

Surveying Resources

It is right now making a careful survey to determine the advantages, attractions and resources of Glendale that can be profitably advertised by the Chamber of Commerce, after which it will adopt such a publicity program as will be consistent with what Glendale has to offer.

In addition to these, dozens of smaller problems come up during a month's business which are of such a character as to permit them to be solved without delay. These are taken care of without delay, and while they occupy the attention of the Chamber of Commerce officials temporarily, they are but sidelights, the main things being the problems that will be of the greatest value to the people of Glendale as a whole.

FREE MATINEE AT PALACE GRAND

On Thursday afternoon they will give a free matinee for all children under 12 years of age. Let the kiddies go and enjoy the marvelous scenes and action in this wonderful picture.

HARDING'S CABINET ENTHUSIASTIC WALKERS

By T. N. SANDIFER
(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.— President Harding's Cabinet today is fully as athletic as any of its predecessors, to judge by the activities of its members during their off-hours around Washington.

Be it said in the beginning, however, that these "off-hours" are not numerous at present.

Not only the Cabinet but many members of Congress have joined in the wave of physical culture which has swept over the capital since the President became so active on links and afield.

The new fad takes various forms. Secretary of the Navy Denby, a veteran of Navy and Marine Corps, is a farmer when he has time; Secretary of Labor Davis keeps in training by eating only the lightest of lunches; several officials do away with the lunch hour altogether, and most of them are enthusiastic hikers.

The most strenuous devotees of the latter recreation, howeevr, belong to what is known unofficially as "The Statesmen's Marching Club," and it lives up to its name. Its principal members are Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., assistant secretary of the navy; Senator James Wadsworth, New York, and Representative "Nick" Longworth, Ohio. Colonel Roosevelt, who is also one og the "light lunchers," mostly because of lack of time, usually leads the "column," according to his associates.

The rough garb affected by the club has led to a number of complications. Recently, while the trio were resting in a bosky section near Washington, they overheard the mother of several children who had been picnicking nearby warn her husband to "keep an eye on the children, because I think there are three horrid tramps over by the road." She was greatly surprised when she found who the "tramps" were.

When President Harding "golfs" he nearly always has several of his late associates of the Senate as partners; while other members of Congress practice walking to "work," which latter, in view of the local car service, is at times about the best way to get there. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, of Illinois, and Representative Phil Campbell, of Kansas, head the Congressional hiking delegation.

A physician says red soothes the nerves. It doesn't have that effect on Mr. Dawes if it is tape.

American women have the most beautiful eyes in the world, says a well-known London photographer.

JOHN D., JR. GOES TO CHINA SO SECRETARY MAY REST

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The absence of John D. Rockefeller, jr., who is on a three months' trip to the Far East, won't make Robert W. Gumbel, his secretary, grieve overmuch. Gumbel admitted that today. Gumbel says he will get a rest-up, which is scarcely possible when the son of the world's richest man is on the job.

Rockefeller is going to Pekin, China, to dedicate the Pekin Union Medical College, built by the Rockefeller millions. He took his family along. It is his first trip to the Orient.

"Mr. Rockefeller, my boss, is a very democratic man," said Gumbel. "He is always kindness and consideration itself to all. I have been closely associated with him for many years—ever since I put on long trousers.

"He has a great capacity for keeping me busy. I'm glad I'm staying here and not going to China. I'll get a rest.

"My admiration for Mr. Rockefeller is unlimited, and I never cease to marvel at his remarkable self-control and poise. I believe it is impossible to ruffle him."

Rockefeller said he hoped to learn something about China first hand before returning.

Round the Sport Circle with Jack Veiock, International News Sporting Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Tristram Speaker, manager of the World's Champion Cleveland Indiana, deserves a word of credit for the manner in which he has built and operated his ball club.

Sir Tris is the original emergency man. He is always there in a pinch. He can dig up talent when he needs it in a way that is nothing short of uncanny. He is a builder. He is a manager who gets 100 per cent out of every player on his team. He knows how to handle men.

These are the reasons why Cleveland's Champs rose above the rank and title of second division teams soon after Speaker took hold of them. And for the same reasons the 1921 Indians have been setting the pace in the American League ever since the season opened.

Yanks and Indians Have Made It Two-Team Race

Prior to the beginning of the pennant race it was apparent to the "talent" that the Indians and the New York Yankees were destined to be very much in the spotlight. They have made the race a two-team affair almost from the beginning and they are slated to fight it out tooth and nail right down to the last gasp of the season, according to present indications.

In such a fight for the pennant sustained winning power and morals are going to count heavily. In this respect the Indians have it on the Yanks. Miller Huggins team bristles with class. It is powerful in hitting and it has great pitching strength, too. But for some reason or other the Yanks seem unable to take and hold a winning stride. They win often and by sizable scores. But they are prone to falter in the pinches and, worst of all, they have a habit of going completely to pieces before some of the weakest clubs in the league.

Indian Team is Great on Staging Eighth Inning Rallies

The Indians, on the other mitten, never know when they are beaten. All clubs look alike to them. They batter their way to victory in many a game that looks hopelessly lost. They have won more games with late inning rallies than any other club in the two major leagues, and through it all the fire and spirit of Tris Speaker stands out like a beacon. Tris, in himself is an inspiration to his men. In the field he performs marvels. At the bat he is a demon. He sets an example for his men by doing everything well. His nimbleness and ginger make a joke of the silver that is sprinkled through his hair and his quick brain and solid baseball sense enable him to keep a mental jump or two ahead of most of his rival managers.

Perhaps the Indians will be beaten to the wire by the Yanks. They may lose out to a club that abounds with power. But they surely will go down fighting like heroes and the team that finishes ahead of them will know it has been in a pennant race.

DUNDEE IS NO QUITTER

Johnny Dundee is something like a brook. He doesn't seem to know when it is time to quit. He is a sort of perpetual motion man.

As far back as a year ago the fistic critics were agreed that Johnny was at the end of his rope as a fighter. He tried four or five times to whip Benny Leonard but could never succeed. Every time he met the Bronx boy he got a worse trimming, but he was always ready to come back for more and he still has hopes of standing over Leonard while the referee tolls off a fatal count of ten.

Jawn's chances of ever realizing his fondest hope are very slim, but this does not detract from his qualities as a scrapper. Few tougher or more consistent lightweights have ever broke into the game in this country than Dundee and he will be fighting for a number of years to come unless present signs fail. The Scotch Wop owns several thoroughbred race horses, which are very expensive pets. Quite often he finds that the upkeep of his horses is greater than what they can win for him and he hops right into the ring to dig out enough cash to carry his stable along. It's a gay life for Dundee.

JAP LANGUAGE SCHOOL HERE TO BE INSPECTED

Institution on Los Feliz Road To Be Examined as To Its Compliance With State Law, Which Provides for Teaching English in Alien Classrooms

Because of the state law which went into effect in July, forbidding the conducting of a private school in whole or in part in a foreign language with out a permit from the state superintendent of education, Richardson D. White, superintendent of schools, and Emil Kiefer, commander of the Glendale Post, American Legion, within the past week looked up the Japanese school that has been conducted in the south part of the city on Los Feliz road.

They found that it was not in session and that it had given up the Los Feliz location for another on a short, blind street leading from the east side of the Forest Lawn memorial park to San Fernando road, where a building is in the course of conctruction.

The Law Outlined

As outlined by Mr. White, the law provides that no person shall conduct or teach in a private school conducted wholly or in part in a foreign tongue, without the permit referred to, and no permit shall be granted to conduct or teach in such a school unless the superintendent of public instruction is satisfied that the applicant is possessed of a knowledge of American history and institutions, and knows how to read, write and speak the English language, provided, however, that the provision concerning a knowledge of the English language shall be liberally construed up to July 1, 1923.

Affidavits Required

The law also provides that before issuing a permit to conduct a private school in a foreign language, the superintendent of public instruction shall require the applicant to file an affidavit pledging himself, after being granted a permit, to abide by the regular rules for public instruction and to so direct the minds and studies of pupils as will tend to make them good and loyal American citizens, and will not instruct or permit pupils to receive instruction in said schools in any way inconsistent therewith.

"No such school shall be conducted for more than one hour a day or six hours a week, nor more than 38 weeks in any school year, provided, however, that any pupil over the age of 17 years who is not required to attend the grade or high schools, shall be exempt from the provisions of the act."

To Restrict Foreign Languages

It will be seen that the act aims to closely restrict all schools conducted in a foreign language and to allow the issuing of permits only after the applicant has made affidavit that he or she will teach American ideals.

Out of kindness to the Japanese who are interested in the school referred to, Mr. White will take steps to see that they are made acquainted with the provisions of the new law and not to violate it through ignorance.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep their locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives

French Plan Canal To Nullify Gibraltar Straits

By HARRY L. ROGERS,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 22.—A deep-sea canal, connecting the Atlantic Ocean with the Mediterranean Sea, is the latest solution offered by French naval experts of the problem of a new naval policy for France, according to advices just received here from Paris.

This waterway would link Bordeaux with the Mediterranean and would be navigable for the largest battleships. As the Kiel Canal gave the Kaiser control of the Baltic, notwithstanding the best efforts of the British fleet, French naval experts believe this "Canal des Deux-Mers," or Canal of the Two Seas would give France the mastery of the Mediterranean, nullifying the boasted impregnability of the defenses of Gibraltar.

Heretofore France has maintained an ample fleet in the Mediterranean, depending upon Great Britain to protect her coasts on the Atlantic and the Channel.

Bring New Naval Policy

With the Bordeaux Canal in operation, it is argued, France would be able to pursue a naval policy independently of Great Britain. By maintaining a fleet of moderate size she could protect both the Atlantic coast and the Mediterranean, as the canal would permit rapid and easy movement of ships from one base to another.

What is believed to be a characteristic view among French naval experts is expressed by a writer in the official organ of the French marine. In discussing the question of a French naval policy, he says:

"Let us examine first our naval policy as it existed in the years which preceded the war. That policy was based upon the 'Entent Cordiale.' Under it we kept in the Mediterranean a fleet of sufficient power to assure us of supremacy. Great Britain was charged with the protection of our coasts on the Channel and the ocean.

"We Remain at Mercy"

"Should France, in 1921, continue that policy, giving over entirely to Great Britain the duty of protecting the greater part of our coasts? That would mean that we shall remain at the mercy of any change in the political allignment of our Allies.

"Ought we then to have as the Americans have, a fleet in the Atlantic and another in the Pacific, a fleet in the ocean and another fleet in the Mediterranean. That would be very costly.

"It would seem rather that the time has come for the construction of the famous Canal of the Two Seas, which would link Bordeaux with the Mediterranean.

"This canal would cost two or three billions of francs. Aside from its military importance, it would constitute a channel of communication of the first order, and its traffic would be almost as important as that of the Suez Canal. In case of war it would permit of rapid concentrations of our sea forces, such as Napoleon never dreamed of.

"Ought to Undertake This"

"France ought to undertake this great work. Throughout the world the nations are debating as to what types of war vessels should be built, without reaching a satisfactory agreement. They fear to expend some hundreds of millions for warships which may become obsolete before tthey are completed.

"The Channel of the Two Seas, provided that it is made large enough and deep enough, will remain after ten years, after twenty years, an instrument of unequalled military value, even as the Kiel Canal, twenty years after its completion, enabled the German squadrons to control the Baltic.

"This great undertaking should not frighten the country which gave birth to Ferdinand de Lesseps. Let us construct the Canal of the Two Seas."

TWINS DEFY LANDLADY
(By International News Service)

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—City Housing Commissioner Herbert E. Ellis is confronted with a new problem.

A little over a year ago a young married couple occupying half of a 2-family dwelling in Roxbury were blessed with a baby boy. Their landlady then notified them that if another addition to the family came they wolud have to move. Ellis was called to the telephone by the young husband.

"What'll I say to the landlady, now?" came over the wire from the young husband. "We've just had twins!"

"The landlady is probably so overcome with the shock she won't do anything," replied Ellis.

SHANTUNG TRICK EXPOSE RESENTED BY JAPANESE

By DUKE N. PARRY,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

TOKIO, Aug. 23.—"At this juncture Mr. Lansing publishes a book which repeats the old story regarding Shantung. The relations of Japan and China have been drifting in an undesirable direction recently owing to the instigation of mischief makers. But as a result of better understanding there was hope of an improvement.

"If Mr. Lansing's book is widely circulated it might change the tide, and this would be a matter of serious concern to the Far East and to the whole world. What Mr. Lansing says is flatly against facts, and his use of the term "blackmail" is more than can be borne by Japan."

One of the first works of the League of Nations' Association of Japan, in which Viscount Shibusawa is a leading member, has been the publication recently of a criticism of former Secretary of State Robert Lansing's book, "The Peace Negotiations." The criticism is written by Dr. J. Soyeda, a leading writer of Japan and a member of the organization. It takes the story of the Peace Conference up in detail, and, coming out as it does when the question of Shantung is more or less in the limelight of international affairs, it may be expected to have some effect on the public mind in the countries where it is circulated.

The particular part that Dr. Soyeda deals with in the opening chapter of his book, or pamphlet, is the Shantung question as it was settled and the race "exchange," as Lansing puts it.

"Mr. Lansing alleges that the Shantung question was exchanged for the racial question," says Dr. Soyeda. "Lansing further asserts that, taking advantage of Italy's withdrawal, Japan threatened to withdraw when she had no real intention of withdrawing. Let us show how erroneous is the statement that the Shantung question was exchanged for the race question. The so-called proposal for the abolition of racial discrimination was rejected by the committee on April 11. 1919. It was reported that 11 out of a total of 17 members voted in favor of it, but it was dropped on the ground that the importance of the matter required a unanimous vote. Thus the fate of the racial question had been doomed before the Shantung question reached its climax."

Dr. Soyeda then takes up what he terms lack of appreciation on the part of China for what Japan has done and is willing to do for the neighboring republic.

"Shows No Appreciation"

"While Japan proposes to return Shantung, captured at so great a sacrifice, not only does China show no appreciation, but she ungratefully declares that Japan has no right in the matter, and that the province cannot be directly received from her. Mere common sense is enough to show which is right.

"Let America be placed for a moment in Japan's position. After the Paris conference Japan has from time to time reminded China of the advisability of at once opening negotiations for the return of Shantung, but China wishes to submit the question to the League of Nations, and as a result no progress, has been made toward a settlement."

Here Dr. Soydea's criticism brings the American who reads the book up to the present moment, when China is instructing her Minister at Tokio to deny all reports that China has the least intention of dealing with Tokio direct. China sees in the disarmament and Pacific conferences, called for Washington, excellent opportunity to bring the Shantung questions before a far more influential group than the League. Japan says she will not discuss Shantung at Washington. And this is where one of the opening problems of the big meeting is resting.

J. C. WAITE TALKS OF LABOR STRUGGLE

J. C. Waite, a loyal Glendalian who has been captured by San Francisco because of his business connection with the Pacific Desk company, says that the labor situation there has been one of absorbing interest. Said he:

"The last three months have been a death grip between labor and capital. It is a fight to the finish. If the capitalists let labor win, they are done.

"The builders and contractors are fighting for the American plan. They are willing to pay the wages and give the hours wanted, but claim the American right of every man to work whether he belongs to the union or not.

"The unions made so many arbitrary rules that they became unbearable, and contractors, builders, bankers and business men generally, have raised a fund of $3,000,000 to fight this matter to a finish. This has had a tendency to depress business in San Francisco, coming as it did after a period of strikes. Not a hammer has swnug on seven or eight of the largest buildings in San Francisco, now in the course of construction, for over three months. The unions have been balloting on a general strike and 50 out of 54 voted for it.

"Builders and contractors leased a hotel to shelter workers brought in from the outside to work on buildings, and 5000 are now employed, but 18,000 union men in building and allied trades have been idle for over three months. The schedule of wages (minimum) for common labor is $5.55 a day, and the maximum $10.80."

RESEARCH HOSPITAL STAFF INCREASED

So rapid has been the growth of the Glendale Research hospital, which was established here about four months ago, that it has already been found necessary to provide larger quarters for the increased number of employes that is maintained at the institution. Several small bungalows to house the employes will be erected just as soon as plans are drawn and arrangements completed.

At the present time this hospital establishment comprises three buildings. There is the hospital building which is equipped with 40 beds. This building has a fully equipped laboratory, an X-ray department, three operating rooms, etc. Its equipment is equal to that of any hospital in Southern California.

There is the utility building, which houses the kitchtn dining-room, laundry, nursery, etc., and the nurses' home, which accommodates ten nurses.

At the present time 27 people are employed at this hospital. They include ten regular nurses, eight special nurses, bookkeeper, dietician, cook, two helpers, two dining-room maids, janitor and two maids in the hospital.

Large pendants of hand-painted crystals are worn on fine black cords.

JONAH AND THE GREAT FISH

By REV. W. E. EDMONDS

The modern unbelievers have taken great pleasure in seeming discoveries of errors in the Bible, the Word of God. They differ in an offensive manner from the infidels of a former generation. They were frank and manly in that they refused to claim for themselves the title of Christian, but declared plainly that they were not Christians, but opponents of the faith. The modernists appropriate the name of Christian and then reject everything distinctly Christian. They profess admiration for Christ, and then deny every essential which He taught. They hold themselves competent to determine what of His teachings were true and what false. They have assailed the historicity of many of the statements of the Bible, but recovered records of the very stories in the ancient walls through scientific archaeology have cried out against them and proven them untrue. The one great event upon which they have dwelt the longest and with the greatest confidence and satisfaction, even heaping upon it all manner of ridicule, is the account of Jonah and the great fish. They have gone to much labor and showed much learning and skill as they have measured the throats of whales and sharks, and determined their circumference and diameter, and showed the impossibility of any living thing continuing to live for three days inside the body of another. So, with great gusto and big smiles, they pronounced the whole account of Jonah a bungling myth, in which the writer had gone so far as to enwrap the sublime in the ludricous.

The cylinders now found in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania were buried in the ruins for centuries, while the great scholars of Germany and their followers in other countries whittled away at the Bible. But, in an unexpected moment, by the hand of His servants, God brought forth the cylinders with their writings on imperishable substances, to bear witness to the truth of His Word and to confound the gain-sayers. Now, while Germany is in the dust and her followers in confusion, the cylinders and the Bible stand forth in victory.

So, too, the great fish which was stranded and captured recently off the coast of Florida, testifies. For a length of time which we cannot measure, this fish lived in the great depths, all unknown to man and his greatest scientific knowledge. In His own time, God made the sea give it up, and it is preserved in the National Museum at Washington. This fish weighed 30,000 pounds. Its liver weighed 1700 pounds. Its length was 45 feet; its circumference 23 feet 9 inches; its diameter 8 feet 3 inches, so that the largest man could stand upright, and its mounth and throat are large enough to admit two men. It contained hundreds of pounds of fish of all sizes, all alive. Thus this fish, of the twentieth century, has given the lie to the boasted speculations of the great modernists and turned their boasted wisdom into shame. The Word of God still stands, and the mockery of men is proven false. Let believers in this age of blatant unbelief note God's witnesses.

Our Lord's sign is still true. "For, as Jonah was three days and three nights in the sea monster's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

Poor, sinful man, how puffed up he becomes over a little knowledge! when indeed, he is ignorant, knows nothing.

NOW IS THE TIME

The British House of Commons has given way to the argument that Great Britain must keep its navy up to the two-power standard and has authorized the construction of four new battle cruisers. The United States naval program provides for the expenditure of approximately $400,000,000 and Japan contemplates a navy greater than ever before.

Thus does the competition go on continuously. Hundreds of millions are being spent by nations that are already taxed to the limit and headed toward bankruptcy. When Japan increases her navy, the United States, logically, votes more funds for a large fleet. As the American navy grows, Great Britain naturally feels obliged to build more battle cruisers. There is no end.

The one great gain from the world war, the only gain that in the least measure can be held to compensate for its horrors and losses, is the changed attitude of the people of all nations toward war. If the great war was not a war to end warfare, then it was an utter failure. Unless the people of the chief world powers convince their governments that future wars must be minimized, then the soldiers who died in Flanders gave their lives in vain.

The first and fundamental step toward everlasting peace is disarmament. If ever there was a time for international disarmament by agreement, that time is now. It is almost as important that the nations which are to meet in Washington and discuss plans for disarmament come to some sort of an agreement as it was essential that the allied and associated powers defeated the central powers. Indeed, if an agreement to disarm is reached at the Washington conference, that notable occasion will be remembered long after the defeat of Germany has faded from the pages of history. The importance of the approaching congress of world delegates cannot be over-estimated.

GOOD ENGLISH

"Correctness and precision in the use of the mother tongue is one of the first marks of an educated man," says President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University.

You can never speak more than one language with perfection, and that is the language of your childhood.

Language is more than a set of symbols to express ideas. It is the ideas. It makes and molds thought.

A Frenchman does not merely talk differently from a German—he thinks differently.

Language is not a formula—it is life. It is living self-expression.

So you cannot be fluent in French until you think French, feel French, are French. Verily, verily, you must be born again to speak a foreign tongue.

The study of other languages is chiefly valuable in increasing your understanding of your own, revealing the subtleties of its derivations, its shades of implication.

The only way to become a master of English, as Richard Grant White pointed out, is to associate with those who speak it intelligently, use it skilfully.

Good speech comes not alone by learning rules, but mainly by absorption. It is essentially a craft to be gotten by imitation.

To speak well you must be constantly with people who speak well. To write well you must feed upon books written in good English.

And it is worth while. A crudiy of speech reveals your lack of culture more than does a hat out of style.

KEEP FACTS STRAIGHT

The Far East question, or, as it more directly affects us, the Japanese immigration problem, is perhaps the greatest complexity before the United States. Even the disarmament conference is likely to find it impossible to escape this perturbing problem. It is, therefore, essential that opinions be formed carefully and judgments made with deliberation. The lawless incident at Turlock, Calif., the other day should not be confused with the Japanese question.

According to press dispatches, about 90 male Japanese workers were ousted from the community because white workers objected to the low wages for which the Orientals were working in the fruit orchards. While there may have been a slight element of race prejudice in the incident, the chief motive was inspired by the union's attack on lower wages. The dispatch does not say if the union, composed of white men, belonged to organized labor, but the fact remains, it was a closed group of men fighting what union men call scabs. The affair was entirely industrial.

Such a scene may have occurred in any locality, and the men deported might have been Americans, Scandinavians or Italians. The anti-Japanese alarmists will, of course, make much capital out of the unfortunate and lawless affair, but level-headed people will not confuse it with the real problem growing out of immigration from the Far East.

On the theory that the Dempsey-Carpentier mixup was a boxing match and not a prize fight, it is planned to show pictures of same in New York. A federal statute provides that prize fight pictures cannot be shown outside of the state in which the fight took place. The difference between a prize fight and a boxing match would make a good topic for the stove league.

If the disarmament conference program becomes much more extensive, President Harding will not have much time to use that chair which the editors gave him.

Senator Penrose admits hopes for economy are fading rapidly. When the spoils go to the victors there is little left for the taxpayer.

Since the conviction of Mrs. Kaber 2367 paragraphers have remarked that the conviction was a reflection upon her beauty.

MOVIE DIRECTING IN AFRICA DURING LATE WORLD WAR

By LORIMER JOHNSON

"Speakin' in general I 'ave tried 'em all,
The 'appy roads that take you o'er the world,
Speakin' in general, I 'ave found 'em good,
For such as connot use one bed too long,
But must get 'ence, the same as I 'ave done,
An' go observin' matters till they die."
—KIPLING, "The Tramp Royal."

I sure 'ave tried 'em all, or most of 'em. Once in Greenland, at a feast of blubber and whale oil, I was made tribal brother of an Esquimaux colony, and the ceremony was duly celebrated by a proper rubbing of our respective noses, but as Kipling says, "that's another story." Then again, at the head waters of the Amazon, but that also goes into the "other story" category.

But this time "Allan Quatermain" has nothing on me as I am also a Zulu, for I have been admitted into full blood brotherhood with the Zulu race, and though of a rather different color, they didn't let that stand in my way, but made me one of them, after a rather elaborate ceremony. There is one great thing about the Zulu's, and that is, they are never in a hurry, but take ample time in all their affairs, why I have personally seen the preliminary ceremonies to a wedding take three days and there was something doing all the time, both in the day time and at night. Of course, they gave me a name, that is they gave me a name for personal use, but the name that the Chief or the principal Induna gives to the tribe is only used amongst themselves, and is not revealed to the newly accepted member. It is usually founded on some characteristic or a blemish of some kind, and it's not polite to mention it—It took me a long time to find this out but I had a ground work to start on as I have an eyelid that droops and at last I found out that was the tribal name for me, but the name I was to use was "Koos-y-umcool" or the "Chief from the outside."

I left London on a Union Castle liner, late in 1915, that is the train left London and the steamer left Tilbury, we sailed about six in the afternoon, and by six o'clock the next day found we had gone at least ten miles and anchored—We were rather an important lot of people on board, some of the biggest men in England were on their way to South Africa, Botha had sent for them for a conference re future operations in a military way in the then German colonies—German South West had surrendered and placed under the English flag, and operations were contemplated in the colony called German East Africa, so that's why the authorities were taking extra care of us. We were conveyed down the channel by two cruisers and two "mine sweepers." The "sweeper" kept about a half a mile ahead of us, as we started again and so we went slowly along. It was rather nerve racking to watch the boats ahead as at any moment they might pick up a mine and then good bye to the protection we had. All day this continued and the boats went with us until we were off the coast of France, then they left us to go on alone. Night came on then and that was the worst of all. Lights out, not even the green and red lights at the sides were on. In our cabins the port holes were screwed and sealed tight, and were painted all over with a heavy black paint, and closely drawn over all were heavy dark curtains. We were cautioned not to smoke on deck, and above all to wear no light colored clothing. Dinner was announced and the large and beautiful saloon the illumination consisted of one four candle incandesant light, it was far from pleasant and a really good dinner was not enjoyed. Many passengers did not leave the deck, but set in their steamer chairs with heavy coats and life preservers tied around them. This continued for six days, and oh how welcome was the first rays of the rising sun, for then at least we could see where we were.

On the afternoon of the sixth day land was sighted, the first northern island of the Madeira group, and presently we were in sight of Funchal. "All passengers are allowed four hours ashore," maybe that didn't sound good—so we piled into a launch and went ashore. Funchal Madeira, is a place "by time forgot," and is as it was hundreds of years ago, quaint old streets, wonderful Cathedral, and a most novel means of transportation—sledges drawn by oxen, and strange to say these go through the streets side by side with an occasionable automobile, all is peace and quiet, had dinner at a cafe that was Parisian with Spanish cooking, but there goes the warning whistle from the steamer, so we start back, and away for Africa. Poor Funchal, only a few months afterwards, a couple of German sub-marines came there, emerged, and shelled the defenseless town, fortunately no great damage was done, but the intent was there.

Lights still out until on the fourth day after leaving Madeira, all was bright and cheerful, and at night all the lights full on, how different it all seemed.

Well, this seems rathter removed from the Zulu story with which I started, but it tells how I got to Africa.

At last at Cape Town, then up to Rhodesia, and back to the Cape, making stops in the Transvaal, Free State and then off to Natal-Fine trip by steamer to Durban, then another boat to Delagoa Bay, and its capital, Lourenco Marques—the head place of the Portugese colony of Mozambique. Funny things happened there. The Colony at the time I arrived was neutral, and at the Cardozo hotel were five of the richest Germans who had been residents in Johannesburg, Transvaal. These men had been interned in Maritzburg after the riots in the Transvaal, which had been caused by the banquetts given by them to celebrate the sinking of the "Luisitania"—by some means, in which money was freely used, they had escaped from Maritzburg, and gone to Delagoa Bay. They were living in fine state at the hotel, had unlimited money, and were naturally welcome, I rather resented their proximity, but realized I to was an "alien," so kept quiet. Two days after my arrival I was the guest of the Governor-General at the Palace, and next day went with him on board the Portugese cruiser "Adamastor." He went below to confer with the commander, and while I was strolling around the deck, I accidently overheard two of the officers speaking in French, and learned that the Governor had brought word on board of the seizure of all the German steamers in Portugese ports, including those then in Delagoa Bay—this was of course a state secret. That night at the hotel, our "Boches" were as usual celebrating at dinner, wine was flowing, toasts were given, and all was merry. Suddenly a captain and a squad of men entered and the Germans were arrested and taken away to a hastily prepared internment camp, at the base of the hills, in the railway yards, where malaria was the chief thing to fight, as well as the myriads of mosquitoes, which we hope did their duty as faithful allies.

My guides were given me by the Governor, and we prepared to enter Zululand—Horses cannot live in southern Mozambique, unless they have been "salted" as it is called, and there are very few obtainable in consequence, but I got two who served pretty well at the time and who were well served later, as I will explain later.

Zululand is bounded on the east by the Indian Ocean, south by Natal, (which was formerly a portion of Zululand) and on the west and north by the Transvaal and Swaziland — it is about 250 miles long and 200 miles at its widest point. Rock formations mark the ocean boarder, and the interior for the most part consists of fertile lands, a rolling country of hills and valleys, easily accessible and could be made a great farming country. The natives live there in the same more or less primitive state of their ancestors—and are happy and no longer warlike. They are physically the most perfect specimens of the human race in existence, well over middle stature. This physical perfection depends upon a Spartan code of practical eugenics, no imperfect baby grows up, sexual morality is of the very highest, and is in conformation with the Zulu code, violations of the code are punished with death, but cases are very rare where punishment is necessary.

Their principal food is ground corn, which they call "mealie-meal," they can and do dispose of vast quantities of this food and seem to thrive on it, of course they are fond of meat, of which they do not get very much, outside of the hunting, but the mealie meal is their staple food. I have eaten a lot of it myself, and it's good, much like the fine hominy we get in America, they all make what is called kaffir beer. The flowering parts of the mealie plant are cut and boiled in large pots, this is then strained and cooled and re-boiled, for at least four times, it is then poured in calabashes and allowed to cool, and is not disturbed for a week. Then is is ready to drink. This beer should appeal to the prohibition elements in America, as the alchoholic properties are only about one and a half per cent, yet the Missionary people in Africa have tried to prohibit even the manufacture of this most harmless drink, calling it "an intoxicating beverage," as it is beer, and on the same principal of abjecting to the California oyster cocktail, as it is a cocktail. I drank the beer once, sour insipid, didn't like it, but the Zulus do—I have seen a lot of "Beer Feasts" in various kraals, where a vast lot of it was drunk, but I have yet to see a native in the slightest degree affected by it.

An unmarried girl allows her hair to be natural, fluffy around her head, which she is married a small block is made about five inches in diameter, and three inches thick. On this block the hair is drawn back and tacked on by small pegs—each year the block is made longer until the very old women wear a block some twelve to sixteen inches long. The hair is never cleaned except at the times the block is changed, but strange to say it is generally clean and the verminious condition is unknown. They sleep on a hard raised block of wood so the headress is not mussed. The present day Zulu has no other arms of offense or defense than were possessed by his earliest ancestors, he carries as they did three Assegais, one for thrusting, one for throwing and one for disemboweling, also a knob-kerri, a club with a large knob at the end, and a shield covered generally with a toughened bullock hide, and somtimes made of hippo, or rhinecerous hide. They become very adept at using these Assegais, and are instructed in their use from infancy. Speaking of the disemboweling spear, it was told me by an old Induma named Malambula, and who was in the battle of Isandula in 1879, that what at the time was called mutilation by the English, was not so and for this reason—When the body of Louis Napoleon (the Prince Imperial) was found the abdomen was found cut open and naked—Malambula said, that the Prince's party was surprised by the attack, that the Prince had been bathing in a nearby spruit, and rushed into the fight as he was—his body was found by eighteen of the English and many more of the Zulus. The Prince put up a wonderful fight, leading his men—his body was piered by innumerable assegais, and so he died a brave man. His was the only body opened, and for this reason, he was the leader or chief, as the Zulus recognized, and so they used the disemboweling assegai on him. This honor is only accorded a Chief, and is not mutilation in the sense in which it is used. The Zulu custom is to thus open a body to prevent the consequent distortion which would be caused by gases generated in a dead body, and so prevent the entry of the dead into the Zulu Nirvana of the valiant. That's a new point, and one I do not think is generally known.

There is not much game left in their country now, and they are becoming agriculturists, but livestock is coin of exchange and not lightly to be killed for the pot, consequently the present of a goat or two makes you solid, while a whole steer procures you a deathless niche in the Zulu Hall of Fame, but they must approve of you first or gifts are lost investments. Well, I have got off of my direct story but this Zulu stuff tells of their life and customs, and I have tried not to make it too dry reading. Leaving Lourenco Marques with my two guides we went due southwest for some twenty miles to reach the ford of the Usuto river—it's a lot of trouble getting horses across this river as they must not be allowed to drink the water at this point, as it produces the first cause of "horse-sickness"—we are compelled to water them at various wells and spruits, which are harmless at least in comparison. After crossing the Usutu, we enter the northern portion of Zululand, which is called Tongo land, a native village of Mapoy, is the first kraal of size to be found, a full description of the trip might be rather dry reading, but we found it quite a wet experience as the rains had started and the various spruits and streams were quite swollen. We followed the Usutu for some seventy-five miles until we reached the Umvalosi, a larger river than usual which empties into St. Lucia Bay on the Indian Ocean. Then on reaching Somopo, on the Umlatusi, we were only fifteen miles from Eshowe, which is on the railway and which is a direct communication with Durban in Natal.

All of this part is rather fair sized hills along the banks of the Tugela which has its source in the hills back of Ladysmith, but which by reason of the snakey way it runs, covers a vast lot of territory before it reaches the ocean. Before reaching Eshows, we struck due west to reach Esthlengni, which is the head kraal of the remnants of the Zulus, this is about 90 miles from the coast, and is due west of Cape Vidal. We passed through many villages all very similar—the Zulu generally builds his Kraal on the side or near the top of a hill, this consists of the hut called "Kyas," which are built around a centre enclosure called the Kraal. In the Kraal are kept the cattle and other animals, and they are well taken care of, being driven in each night from the grazing lands around the village, and as these cattle are the purchasing power of the wives, the better they look the better demand the owner can make for the fair lady he wants to wed. The Kyas are constructed on a frame work of Wattle and the grass "Tembehele Grass" is woven on this frame work. It is absolutely impervious to rain, and is always dry, the floor of the huts are made from cattle refuse and in time becomes very hard and is kept clean. In the center of the hut is made a place about six feet by two, which is slightly lower than the floor, and on this is burned wood for heating or sometimes a sort of peat which they dry. From the tops of the huts long strings of soot are hanging like cobwebs, this is never disturbed, and each fire adds to its length. Now this will seem funny, but its absolutely true, in spite of the fact that the kyas are always occupied at night and the front door is closed, (one has to get down on hands and knees to enter) the odor is not unpleasant inside, but it is quite aramatic.—Don't think for a moment that the Zulu isn't clean, although in hot weather, if working hard, he may seem a bit gamey, but he washes and uses a sort of soap too.

At Esthlengni there is a spruit about a mile away, they asked me to go bathing with them. Now the hot season is from November to March. The days during that period are hot going up to 105 in the shade, and there isn't much shade, but after the sun is down, it gets very cold and we always rolled up in our fur "kaross" to sleep, it stays cold up to nine in the morning, but you see they bathe at five, and it's still cold at that hour, however, I went with them, and on arrival at the spruit they gave me the post of honor at the head of the stream and I went in. Cold? The water was quite lively from the rains, all frothing up, and I felt as if I had plunged into an ice cream soda, speaking of ice cream soda, in Johannesburg once I asked for, "but that's another story."

Needless to say I didn't go with my friends so early after that, but found nice warm water at ten o'clock, but the Zulus liked the cold. Well it seems to take me a long time to get to Esthlengni. On arrival there we were greeted by the British President, who also acts as the Guardian of the present (so called King) Solomon. For some years, in fact since the death of Dinizulu, there has been no King of Zululand—but in 1916 the British Government acceded to the wishes of the natives and allowed Solomon to assume the Royal Purple.

Solomon is now (1918) 23 years old—he is a direct descendant of Dingaan, who was the great King in 1835, and whose massacre of the Boers is the real start of the history of South Africa, first there was Chaka, then Dingaan, then Cetawayo, Dinizulu and now Solomon. The latter during his boyhood has been under the care of Miss Colenso who is the head of native affairs, and was kept in Johannesburg and Pretoria, so he is really almost European in his education. He is dressed in a modern business suit and really knows how to wear it, and he also has but I must keep that for the finish. He lives in a nice rather bungalow looking house, near that of the Resident, and gave me a good dinner to say nothing of other meals, needless to say he is not confined to "mealie-meal." He speaks good English, is not yet married, but hopes to find a "queen" soon. The subjects of his majesty lives around the central establishment number a few thousands and are "farmers" in the real sense of the term. They are independent in every way, and seem happy. Now as to war—There are today "OVER THERE" about 20,000 Zulus. These men are making trenches, and doing a lot of other work in the rear lines. They are perfectly willing to fight in the front lines but so far have not been allowed to do so, but are being used in many other ways. Strange to say they are being paid three shillings a day, while the Africander or white men who are fighting in the front lines only receive one shilling a day. This has caused a lot of trouble in Africa, this difference in pay, but it has not yet been changed. All of the Zulus are willing to go and do whatever is asked of them, they like the English but hate the Boers. The real cause of the great Zulu War was caused by the treatment they had received from the Boer element, and when England foolishly took portions of their land without proper explanation they thought it was a Boer move and so fought the English, and did fight, there is no braver man on earth than a Zulu. We spent a week with Solomon, then prepared to leave, and here's the joke I referred to before—Our poor old horses were never very classy at any time, and were were not at all pleased with the prospect of one hundred miles trip with them, as the night before we were to leave King Solomon, and he was almost as wise as his famous namesake said: "The roads are quite good I am told, so I'll motor you over to Eshowe in my Studebaker"—And he did—Now what do you think of that—at Eshowe entrained for Durban, passing through vast fields of sugar cane and tea plantations—Natal in time, will be able to supply all the sugar needed in Africa, and is doing it pretty well now, as very little is being imported. The Zulu race is not dying out, but is making rapid progress in the cities in many lines. In some of the mines at Johannesburg, they are shift bosses, of course only over other native workers, but they can and do earn some seven to eight pounds a month, and the ordinary worker gets three or four pounds a month, and all their food, mealie-meal twice a day all they want and meat on Wednesdays and Sundays—they do not work on Sundays, and then wrapped in their blankets or robes frequently of silk and of the most brilliant hues, how they do swank along the roads around the Rand.

Few Zulus will work under ground—this work is done by Shanganis, Swazis and Basutis, but there are many classes of work that the Zulu does above ground, why at the great diamond mines at Cullinan, called the Premier, after the sorting of the stones is made by the white men, I found in a room at the back of the sorting room, four Zulus were going over the refuse in which the white experts had found no more diamonds, and were finding stones, small of course, but diamonds, they told me—but that's another story. And, oh yes, of course I gave Solomon the horses.

ART NOTES

A real national gallery is at last planned for Washington. What is at present called our national gallery, administered by the Smithsonian institute, is housed in a few rooms, totally inadequate in size, lighting and in location, in the national museum where are collected everything from stuffed Indians and stuffed animals to bric-a-brac. The board of regents of the institution, at a special meeting in May, provided for a national gallery commission, whose primary functions shall be to promote the administration development, and utilization of the national gallery of art at Washington, including the acquisition of material of high quality representing the fine arts, and the study of the best methods of exhibiting materials to the public and its utilization to instruction. There are no public funds available for providing a new building to house the collections which are already valued at $7,000,000, but it is hoped, under the leadership of the commission, that public interest will be aroused and public-spirited citizens will volunteer assistance in funds and in gifts of pictures and sculpture. The national gallery of art is the legal repository of all art works belonging to the United States not legally assigned to the other departments of the government.

CROPS REACH MART AND MONEY LOSES ITS TENSION

(By International News Service)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 22.—Carloads of golden grain leaving the wheat belt are commencing to relieve the financial tension, prevailing in this city and the general Southwest since the days of the World War.

The turning point in the world of finance which is marked by the influx of dollars from grains sales has been reached, according to Kansas City bankers.

William T. Kemper, chairman of the board of the Commerce Trust Company, explained the modus operandi of financiers in connection with shipping wheat.

Much Cash Advanced

"At the completion of harvest the country banks advanced cash to the farmers to enable them to make shipments," Mr. Kemper said. "The banks also financed the elevator man.

"During the temporary period of financing country banks called upon city banks for accommodations. But the turning point has been reached. Farmers are selling and are paying off and depositing in the country banks. The country banks in turn are taking up their obligations with the city banks; thus the financial strain in this section is eased.

"There would be a more speedy turnover of the crop if the facilities were ample to care for the output," Mr. Kemper said.

Heavy Call For Cars

"Though the railroads have done well in the handling of shipments I receive requests every day from towns in the Southwest for cars and more cars," he said.

"During the last two weeks about 8,000 cars of wheat have been cleared through here. This represents a cash value of about $17,000,000. As the days pass this and more money will begin to make its entry into Kansas City treasuries.

"And don't forget that Kansas City is the greatest garden spot in the world, surrounded with an abundance of fine wheat, hay and corn," concluded Mr. Kemper.

If that crowd of surveyors finds oil in the Islands, the Fillipino won't be capable of self-government for another hundred years.

The thought of a national debt second to none isn't quite so thrilling as the thought of a navy second to none.

If justice is blind, how does it happen that the pretty woman is always acquitted?

Radio Directed Ships Prove Their Value

By HARRY L. ROGERS,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 22.—"Mother, take in your service flag, for this is a wireless war!"

In some such manner will the Doughboy's derisive gibe at those who saw service behind the lines have to be amended in the next war, if time bears out the predictions of naval and military experts as to the part radio is to play in the conflicts of the future.

Destroyers without a soul on board, manoeuvring at full speed in battle formation; battle cruisers zig-zagging with lightning-like swiftness to escape the bomb of a pilotless airplane or the unseen torpedo of a crew-less submarine; whole fleets of dreadnoughts whose monster guns, aimed by mechanical hands, belch forth tons of steel at other squadrons of electrically-manipulated war-craft—this is the naval warfare of the future, as it is glimpsed by the eye of scientific possibility, from the not inconsiderable height of present-day achievement.

On land the radio-controlled airplane or dirigible may operate even more easily than at sea. Carrying its death-dealing load of bombs or poison gas, which the pressing of a button a hundred miles away may release it could soar over enemy cites, compelling surrender of their inhabitants by the mere threat of destruction it might wreak. Should armies ever get within striking distance of each other huge tanks, laden with tons of high explosive might be guided by radio into the enemy lines and there exploded by a closing contact switch in the control statiton far in the rear.

A few years ago such prophecies would have been hailed as absurb and ridiculous. Today they are accepted as possibilities, even probabilities of the future and the not very distant future at that.

Navy Department experts have been working on problems of radio control for many months and have made notable progress, as was evidenced by the performance of the radio-controlled battleship Iowa during the recent bombing tests off the Atlantic coast. Army engineers, too, are giving intense study to the subject.

What Army experts think of the future of radio in warfare is shown in an official statement concerning the progress of experiments now being conducted at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio.

"The possibilities of radio control and its application to war-time problems are almost without number," says the statement. "Radio control can be applied to any mechanical apparatus that moves, whether it be in the air, on the ground, on the surface of the water, or beneath the water, Huge land tanks may be constructed and filled with TNT and driven to any desired point along the enemy's lines, where the explosive can be fired by means of radio, or it can be applied in a similar manner to a boat, submarine, torpedo, or even an airplane, and the explosive can be fired when and where desired.

Recent visitors at McCook Field have been astonished at the gyrations of a brightly-painted, three-wheeled vehicle which has been dashing to and fro between the buildings and among the airplanes on the field, under no visible means of control. It is often seen to approach a group of persons, its horn tooting wildly, and then, when apparently about to strike them, to stop short, back, turn sharply to right or left and then speed off in the opposite direction.

The movements of the care are controlled entirely by radio impulses sent out from the station at the lower end of the flying field. The fact that no aerial or antenna system is visible adds to the mystification of the uninitiated.

The car is of cigar-shaped construction, about eight feet long, and runs on three pneumatic-tired wheels. Its speed ranges from four to ten miles an hour, and the controls are so nicely adjusted as to make steering along a narrow roadway an easy matter.

An examination of the interior of the car shows an amazing collection of batteries, switches, wires, vacuum tubes, potentiometers, relays and magnetos, all of which are neessary to a complete control of the apparatus. The "brain" of the mechanism is the selector. Various combinations of dots and dashes are sent out from the control station by means of a specially constructed transmitter, each combination calling for the accomplishment of a certain operation of the control apparatus.

It is the function of the "selector" to decode these various combinations of dots and dashes and to close the circuits to the desired controls. So delicatetly is the "selector" constructed and so rapidly will it operate that it is possible to put in operation any of twelve distinct controls in a period of less than one second. That is to say, less than one second elapsed from the time any push-button on the automatic transmitter at the distant radio station is pressed until the control on the car is functioning. Such speed of control has never before been accomplished. The car has been controlled equally well from an airplane and from a ground transmitting station.

BANKER RECOVERING FROM OPERATION

(By International News Service)

Henry P. Davison, member of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and one of the foremost financiers in Roosevelt Hospital, is reported as recovering from an operation for removal of a growth behind one of his ears. This growth practically caused the loss of hearing in one ear and resulted in intense headaches, necessitating Mr. Davison to give up most of his busines cares for the past year.

Pianos made in England in 1913 numbered 120,000; last year the number made was only 50,000.

HAWAIIAN VOLCANO ACTIVITY IS DUE IN NOVEMBER

(By International News Service)

HONOLULU, Aug. 22.—Extreme activity during the Autumn months of this year culminating in a tremendous eruption in November is the prediction being made by local volcanologists for Kilauea volcano, the continuously active volcano situated near the city of Hilo, on the island of Hawaii.

Professor T. A. Jaggar, of the U. S. Weather Bureau, director of the volcano observatory at Kilauea volcano, is said to be among those looking for unusual activity in the crater this Fall. During March of this year there was a most spactacular eruption in which the lava overflowed from the fire pit of Halemaumau onto the floor of the main crater. Since that time there has been a gradual subsidence of the lava in the fire pit, but such movements are usually followed by rising and increased activity, Professor Jaggar says.

If the expected activity takes place it will be the signal, not for panicky flight from the region of the volcano, but for a rush to get there and "see the show," for Kilauea is a "tame" volcano and its eruption, while spectacular in the extreme, is not dangerous and may be viewed from very close range.

Do doubt the mosquitoes were agreeably surprised by the increased area of angles this year.

WOOING OF AGED SWANS WATCHED WITH INTEREST

DENVER, Aug. 23.—What are believed to be the only two North American whistling swans in existence are today cavorting about a small pond in Denver city park.

The birds are valued at $2500 each. The male bird is owned by H. O. Jackson, of this city, while the mate is the property of Judge R. M. Barnes, of Laton, Ill.

The pair will be used for breeding purposes in an effort to prevent the extermination of this rare specimen of the web-footed bird.

Bird 75 Years Old

The male bird is 75 years old and his mate but 15. They have black bills and a touch of orange under their eyes; otherwise the pair is pure white.

"Seventy-five years is far from being an advanced age for a swan," declared Jackson. "They live ordinarily to the age of 150 years.

"So far as I know, these are the only two whistling swans in existence, the last in their line. That's why I am eager that they mate and raise their young. If they do not, it means the extermination of this graceful type of swan.

Mate is Found

"I have owned the male bird for some time. I searched the country before I found a mate. I am convinced they are the only two whistling swans now alive. Judge Barnes, of Laton, Ill., sent the female bird to me, and for a time I kept the pair on my private lake. But this lake proved too small for breeding purposes, and it is crowded, also, with swans of other species, so I turned the pair over to the keeping of city park officials until the young can be raised.

"A peculiarity of this type of swan is the whistling call they use. They do their whistling mostly at mating time."

Whistling swans formerly were common to the Northern United States and Canada, but of recent years they have been practically unknown in these sections.

GERMAN MERCHANTS ARE NOW ACTIVE IN MEXICO

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 23. — "Recognize Mexico and President Alverdo Obregon and divert to America the stream of Mexican money which is flowing by millions of dollars into the pockets of German manufacturers." That was the plea of J. C. Underwood, an American mining expert, upon his arrival in Kansas City from Nogales, Ariz.

According to Underwood, the American business man is losing thousands of dollars which he could otherwise get, solely because of the government's refusal to recognize Obregon and his people.

Underwood says manufacturers and mine operators of Mexico are pleading for equipment to run their plants destroyed during the civil war there.

"The Mexican farmer is sorely in need of threshers and farming equipment. Hundreds of mills are closed because of lack of machinery, but American manufacturers are denied this market because the United States adopts the attitude that the country below the Rio Grande is a void.

"English, French and German salesmen are seizing the opportunity and arriving in Mexico by the hundreds. They are writing orders which otherwise would be filled by American manufactories."

For several years, Underwood has made his home in Nogales, Ariz., where the dividing line between the United States and Mexico passes directly through the middle of the little city's main street.

According to Underwood the time has arrived for America to grasp the fact that Mexico is tired of fighting and that the people stand solidly behind their President.

NEW STARS COMING IN "LIVE WIRES"

A new pair of stars will be seen on the screen at the Glendale Theatre tonight in a photoplay entitled, "Live Wires." They are Edna Murphy, blue-eyed and fair-haired, and Johnnie Walker.

The pair have been elevated to stardom by William Fox because of their clever work in Fox productions. Johnnie is the hero, the fellow that gets all your sympathy and makes the big tears flow as you watch that wonderful Fox picture, "Over the Hill," which has had nearly a year's run on Broadway, and long runs in other cities throughout the United States. Edna also appeared in "Over the Hill." They are a clever pair.

Edna has been in pictures only a little over a year. She was leading woman with Fox for George Walsh in "Dynamite Allen." She is a Brooklyn girl. "Live Wires," it is said, reflects accurately its title.

FAIR BRITISH AND YANKEE GOLF CHAMPS MAY MEET

Miss Stirling, foremost American woman golfer, just returned from Great Britain and France, where she had gone in search of new laurels on the links, but met defeat. She bowed to the superior playing of Miss Leitch in the British ladies' championship at Tunberry, Scotland, and later met defeat at the hands of Miss Wethered in the French women's title tourney, which was also captured by the British champion. Miss Sterling will probably get another chance to play against Miss Leitch next month in the United States national championship for women, on the Hollywood Club links, in which the British champion is expected to take part. Miss Sterling regards Miss Leitch as one of the greatest players of all time.

MRS. INA RANDOLPH DISPOSES OF HOME

Mrs. Ina Randolph, 416 N. Jackson street, has sold her home to Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Kermott, of Wisconsin. Dr. Kermott is a retired physician and has chosen Glendale as the place in which to purchase a home and retire from business life. Mrs. Randolph gave possession of her home at once and Dr. and Mrs. Kermott moved in Monday. A little later Mrs. Randolph hopes to return to Glendale and build a new home for herself, but in the meantime is making her home with a sister who lives at 344 Carroll Park East, Long Beach. Dr. and Mrs. Kermott are happy to be so nicely located in Glendale and proclaim their love for our city already.

GAMBLING IN STOCK CLOSES EXCHANGE IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Aug. 23.— The orgy of speculation representing Germany's ever-increasing prosperity has caused the Berlin stock exchange to be closed for two days in every week. Banks, brokers and jobbers are swamped with thousands of orders, and clients are stampeding to participate in the great boom in industrial shares. Hundreds of extra clerks are being engaged, working far into the night to cope with the overwhelming rush of buying and selling orders.

Although entry into the stock exchange costs several hundred pounds, membership has increased since the armistice by over 1500, more than 50 per cent of the pre-war total. Mushroom paper-mark millionaires are springing up overnight and the scenes inside the exchange are like the mad swirl of the Chicago wheat pit when the "bulls" and "bears" are engaged in a grim financial battle. The public gallery has recently been closed for fear of the effect which the scenes might have on the public mind.

Speculation Increased

Speculation in Germany has increased to a dangerous pitch, partly because of more paper currency and party because the big industrial combines are enormously increasing their capital in order to extend operations. Millions on millions of marks worth of new ordinary and debenture shares are issued every day, and industries which issue them represent certain "gold" value, independent of the paper mark. Any change in the value of the paper mark influences the value of the shares. The recent depreciation of the mark is therefore responsible to some extent for the widespread gambling on the exchange.

Formerly the market for German shares was chiefly confined to German speculations, but foreign capitalists are attempting again to control several important enterprises. This has led to fantastic movements in industrial shares. The reconstruction in Northern France which the German government is forced to carry out, is responsible for extraordinary activity in iron and steel machinery and building shares.

Boom is Foreseen

Apart from that, Germany is about to enter a period of great industrial "boom." Leading brokers report increase in dealings from 3 to 1000 per cent. Fresh evidence of the activity of the German shipping industry is accumulating. The Hamburg-American line is making a great bid for American traffic and is shortly putting in commission the 12,000-ton Bayern, built at Bremen in the Vulcan works, and in the early autumn a third ship, the Wurtemburg, 12,000 tons. All three will be used on the Hamburg-New York service. For the first time since the war the Hamburg-American line is issuing a bulky time-table containing the sailings of its own and subsidiary lines.

The German potash industry reports unprecedented activity, though the price has recently increased. The Kah syndicate orders in one day were over 60,000 pounds.

BULLS VS. BABES

W. B. Trites, the novelist, has been living for some time in Spain, and in a recent letter home he said:

"Spanish children are the most spoiled children in the world. Every Spanish restaurant is filled with their bawling. They tread on your feet and upset your glass as they play tag in every Spanish cafe. In every Spanish theater it is hard to hear the performance through their din. And yet this fact—the fact that Spanish children are unbelievably spoiled—enabled a Spaniard in Palma to knock me out completely in an ethical argument.

"'You Spaniards are a great nation,' I said to him, 'but I can't understand how a nation that produced Velasquez and Valdes can stomach the savage cruelty of the bull-fight.'

"The Spaniard rolled his black eyes at me, emitted a great cloud of cigarette smoke, and said: 'You have in America a number of societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, I believe?'

"'Yes.'

"'And they do good work?'

"'Oh, splendid work.'

"Now the Spaniard showed his white teeth in a smile. 'Well, senor, such societies would be useless in my country,' he said. 'The man who would lift his hand against a little child has not been born in Spain.'"

EYE STRAIN BRINGS CRIME SAYS EXPERT

(By International News Service)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 23.—The startling statement that poor eyesight leads to development of criminals and insane persons as made here by Dr. Reginald C. Augustine, president of the American Optometric Association. Dr. Augustine is on a lecture tour in the interests of "American Eye Conservation."

"Fifty per cent of the criminality and insanity of the United States could be done away with by proper eye treatment in youth," he said.

"Every advance of civilization increases the proportion of criminals and weaklings—all directly traceable to improper care of the eyes.

"Ninety per cent of the industrial accidents, as well as motorcar and train wrecks are due to poor eyes.

"The question is frequently raised," he points out, "as to why our grandfathers had much better eyes than we; how they could see for great distances and for so many years. It's simple. They lived in the open country with nothing to block their vision. Their eyes became tuned to distances. We of the cities have our view cut off by huge buildings wherever we turn, and our vision is thus hindered."

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY AT BESSETTS

One of the most pleasant social affairs of the past week was enjoyed at the charming little home built not long ago by Mrs. Teenie Bessett, at 370 West Wilson avenue. Saturday was her birthday. She did not say which one, but she is so young in spirit and so up-to-date in all her interests and thoughts, that it made no difference to her friends whether her years were many orfew.

Mrs. Bessett did not send out any invitations for a celebration, but her friends and neighbors just naturally dropped in and spent the afternoon with her. One of her guests brought a camera and took pictures of the pretty home, especially of the summer bower in connection with it, and of the company assembled there. At the close of the afternoon, dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. Bessett came to Southern California from Minneapolis, Minn., where she had lived for 56 years. Glendale appealed to her as a place to live more than Los Angeles, where her daughter resides, and so she came here and built the cottage which is now the admiration of her friends.

The guests who met to congratulate her were: Mrs. G. Bell, Miss Mary Stevens, Mrs. Blake Franklin, Mrs Philip Dillinger and son, Gordon, Mrs. Alright, Mrs. E. Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins, of Los Angeles, daughter and son-in-law of the hostess.

Some of the ladies entertained were old friends whom Mrs. Bassett had known in Minneapolis, and who, like herself, are now Californians.

CUTTING THROUGH OF MANY STREETS URGED

The residents of the western part of Glendale are adopting a line of action which, if continued, cannot help but result in the rapid building up of their territory. This consists of opening up the various streets from Pacific avenue westward to the San Fernando road. At the meeting of the Council last Thursday night, the residents owning property in the region west of Hawthorne and Ivy streets requested that the Council take the necessary action towards the opening of those streets from Pacific avenue westward. The property owners in the region of Wilson and Palmer avenues then asked that the necessary steps be taken that would result in the opening of their streets west to the San Fernando road. A request was made to this effect at the called meeting of the Council last night.

As it is the apparent opinion of every member of the Council that all of these blind streets should be cut through to some main thoroughfare, there is little probability that a request of this character will be turned down, providing the majority of the property owners facing on the proposed streets can be secured in favor of the action

She has a little brother named Melvin LeRoy West, after his father and his uncle, Roy L. Kent.

COUNCIL ASSERTS CONTROL OF STREETS

The City Council of Glendale has decided that, so long as the present officials hold control, the streets that are created in Glendale shall be permanent, both in width and construction. At the meeting of the Council last night a motion offered by Councilman Davis and seconded by Councilman Lapham, was adopted to the effect that it shall be the policy of the present Council not to accept for dedication any new streets of a width less than 60 feet, from property line to property line, unless very good reasons be presented in particular cases for the departure from this rule. To this motion all of the councilmen present voted "Aye."

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get slugish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acids of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acid in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

U. S. Sets Russia Good Example Says Alien Boy

By KENT WATSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug., 22.—Being an American newspaperman is not quite as bad as being a peasant in Russia. But being a peasant in Russia is not half as nice as being a "peasant" in America.

That's the version of Harry Lachterman, native of Doroshowa, State of Podolia, Ukrainia, Russia, now an assistant in the St. Louis Bureau of the International News Service.

With his father and mother young Lachterman left Russia eight years ago and came to St. Louis. The boy nine years old at that time, was sent to school here. He had a mania for reading newspapers, he declares, and decided that he wanted to become a maker of newspapers.

Cherishes Some Escapades

Incidents of Russia's hardships are inscribed upon his brain, and he cherishes some of his childhood escapades back in Bar, Ukrainia, where he resided after reaching the age of five years.

Foremost among his impressions is the memory of New York harbor on the day he arrived in America.

"The Statue of Liberty means more to me now than it did on the night I first saw it," he said. "It's lights are brighter from here now than they were from the deckboard. It's a pity that all of Russia can't learn to know the freedom for which that statue stands."

"Last Looked at Grandmother"

"From Bar," he says, "we went to Doroshowa, the village of my birth, to spend a few weeks with relatives. It was there that I last looked at my grandmother, who died during the war. It was like a journey of death when we loaded onto a two-wheeled cart and started away, leaving all our friends behind to seek new fields. The village populace followed the wagon down the road, bidding us farewell. Many of our dearest friends were in tears."

Aside from his farewell to friends and relatives, Lachterman recalls more vividly than anything else a story of how two Russian Cossacks were severely beaten for molesting a Jewish woman, owner of a small confectionery. The Cossacks, who were drunk, he relates, entered the store of the Jewish woman and attempted an outrage upon her. Screams for help, Lachterman says, brought several young Jews, who administered severe beatings to both of the Cossacks.

"A tumult ran through the crowd. Many peasants took their wives and children and fled, fearing a massacre. A majority, however, remained. News of the impending massacre spread throughout the village. The Jews closed their stores, and schools were closed."

There is something innately ambitious about this Americanized Russian youth. He has the ardor to do things, and he has a desire to do something toward transforming his native Ukrainia into a country like America. His is a desire to teach Russia the freedom that he enjoys in America.

"That the stories about the Russian cholera plague and famine now prevalent in Russia," he says, "is greatly exaggerated I have no doubt. There is a scarcity of food, I am sure.

"Ruled by Ruffians"

"The people of Russia are used to warfare. They are used to hardships and struggles. They do not believe what they read in their own newspapers, for they know that the party in power has printed stories that are pure propaganda. Right now Russia is ruled by a band of ruffians, who are selft-seekers for gain.

"Coalitions are formed because the leaders must have some means of force. I believe Russia will know a regeneration for her sufferings. I believe there will come a man who is big enough and righteous enough to win popular favor through a desire to bring justice to all the people.

"Communism and Bolshevism cannot last. Did the majority of Russians favor those docirines there would not be a wave of internal strife sweeping throughout the country.

"I hope some day to see Russia free from the toils of thugs and thieves, I want to see peasants have the same right under the law as the now privileged classes have."
